Take Action: Common Methods of Student Activism

Adapted from <https://www.accreditedschoolsonline.org/resources/student-activism-on-campus/>

Scenes of protestors taking over a square or marching down a busy road pop into most people's minds when they think of activists, but there are several other methods of taking action to make a change.

Demonstrations & Marches

This method of activism involves gathering a large group of people and demonstrating dissatisfaction, typically with a march that ends at a place significant to the cause. For example, student activists protesting gender discrimination in college sports may elect to end their march in a large sports field, where a speaker rallies the crowd.

Internet & Social Media

Facebook sharing, hashtag campaigns, mass-tweeting: The world of social media and blogs has opened several doors for making injustices known, and students can share information across their accounts to maximize their reach. Social media can be used to advance nearly any cause.

Other Media

Using media to raise awareness about a cause can quickly educate potential supporters about the issue and move them to your side. Podcasts, campus radio shows, school newspapers and bulletin boards are all strong advertising platforms. In addition, smartphones let users film, edit and disseminate high-quality videos.

Petitions

Students can collect signatures the old-fashioned way — standing in the center of the student union — or do it online. In either form, petitions help students coalesce around an issue and show leaders how many people believe in a cause. Petitions are often the first step for many different forms of activism.

Sit-ins & Occupations

This protest movement was popularized by students during the Civil Rights Movement. It involves occupying a space and refusing to vacate until requirements are met. This method could be used for a variety of causes, ranging from racial inequalities to longer library hours.

FANBOYS Connectives Guide

Connective (FANBOYS)	Example sentences and description of the connective
For	The kids decided to walk over to McMann's, for there was a crowd gathered outside. In this sentence, "for" gets us ready to understand why the kids walked over to McMann's
And	Joelito loves to eat burgers and fries. In this sentence, "and" puts different words together like "burgers and fries".
Nor	Brandon's dad wasn't able to come to Brandon's Saturday soccer games, nor was his mom. In this sentence, "nor" tells us that both Brandon's dad and mom weren't able to come to the game.
But	They heard mama calling them, but they kept moving towards the restaurant door. In this sentence, "but" tells us that there is a difference to look for.
Or	They had to choose between eating at MacMann's or eating at Cocina las Ollitas. In this sentence, "or" tells us that there is a choice that has to be made.
Yet	They looked everywhere for Kayla's backpack, yet they couldn't find it. In this sentence, "yet" shows that there is a difference to look for)
So	Mr. and Mrs. Thomas lost their jobs at the factory, so they moved from their house to a one-bedroom apartment. In this sentence, "so" lets us know that there is the first part of the sentence caused the second part.

Extension

You learn that the lifeguards at the local pool are made to work for five hours straight with no breaks. You think this is unfair. What would you do to stand up for the lifeguards' rights?

1. Talk with your partner about what you think.
2. Write some sentences about what you think and why.

Additional Drawings and Notes

A large rectangular box with a grey header and a white body. The header contains the text "Additional Drawings and Notes". The body of the box is empty and contains several horizontal lines for drawing and notes.
